Eclipse Entertainment, a music group located in the suburbs of New York, was officially formed in early 2007. Eclipse Entertainment was created when L.E.D. and DJ Taps (known as Old Soul Productions at the time) were introduced to Candyman (of Moneybags Entertainment). Candyman really liked the beats that Old Soul Productions had created and decided that he would love to work with them - together, they formed "Eclipse Entertainment." However, the music group has grown since then; not only in numbers, but also in terms of success. Throughout the past couple of years, Eclipse has gained prominent members, including Triple J, Michael Strauss, Pastense, and Jamie Ballan. In addition, Eclipse has grown significantly in terms of success. From a three-person group with big ideas, Eclipse has many significant achievements, including coming in first place twice at the Apollo World Theater's Amateur Night (in Harlem, NY). So far, Eclipse has produced a number of songs, including three complete albums (one original CD and two mixtapes).
